For the past few months I've been working on a few secret projects that I haven't been able to say much about. One of them finally came out yesterday, which means I can finally talk about it. So here we are with a post on a Saturday. Isn't that novel?

Mini-Dungeons #1: Caves is the first in a series of 3 collaborations with PB Publishing, presenting 3 new mini-dungeons that can work as both stand-alone side quest adventures or work together in one short campaign arc. Phil and I worked together on designing the dungeons, then he handled the writing and I drew the maps. I'm really happy with how this first one has come together, and I'm really excited to share it with everyone.

It's been an absolute pleasure to work with Phil on these, and I'm already looking forward to the next book being released. Each one will tackle a different terrain type - the sharp-eyed among you will have already figured out that this one is all set in caves - and the intention is to produce a series of small adventures that are really easy to drop into your ongoing campaign. I think we've achieved that, and I hope you'll check out this first book and let me know how you feel about it!
